Expose those who corrupt magistrates

WHO MADE HIM DO IT?
A lawyers' group yesterday called on dismissed Court of Appeals Justice Vicente Roxas to reveal who influenced him to act the way he did in the controversial Meralco case in order to complete the cleansing of the judiciary.

Operation Clean Hands Inc., a group of six law firms that combats corruption, said the cleansing would not end with Roxas' ouster, since those who corrupt magistrates should also be caught and punished.

"Investigation should be conducted on who influenced, motivated or corrupted Justice Roxas to act dishonestly and corruptly. It is a safe assumption, based on the circumstances, that Justice Roxas did not do what he did without the reinforcement or prodding from another party—be it a party, a lawyer, a friend, a lawyer or law firm, the group's chair, Francisco Chavez, said in a statement.

Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile said Roxas should be dethroned.

"He deserves to be ousted out of the judiciary. In fact, he should be ousted."

AFP now focused on using force vs rebels

By Christian V. Esguerra
FROM SIMPLY TRYING TO WIN THE "hearts and minds" of communities sympathetic to insurgents, the government is now focusing on using force against armed groups, Defense Secretary Gilbert Teodoro said Tuesday night. (See related story on Page A6.)

"We have been working on the paradigm of root causes for a long time and sometimes forgetting that all communities have problems, but how many of them take up arms?" he told congressmen while defending his department's proposed P56.54-billion budget for next year.

"Most often, the paradigm is used as an excuse to bear arms against the government."

Teodoro was responding to a query by administration Rep. Eric Lacierda about his department's proposals to address the root causes of rebellion, particularly in Mindanao.

While saying that insurgency should be addressed "in a balanced way," he stressed that communities needed "government presence to maintain peace and order and to allow political forces to work."

"It is high time that we not allow anyone to bear arms against the government," Teodoro said. "There are political channels available for the government to use."

Gonzales back to work Monday, after operation

By Christine G. Amodeo
LESS THAN 24 HOURS AFTER UNDERGOING a coronary angioplasty to unblock two blood vessels, National Security Advisor Northern Gonzalez yesterday declared that he was not as sick as he was just "absent," and would be back at his desk in five days.

Gonzales said his senior deputy, Michael...

After tarrying for days in the Philippine Sea, the typhoon called northwest, packing peak winds of 150 kph and gusts of 185 kph, heading for Japan and sparing Cagayan and Benguet parts of islands.

While Marce did not hit land, it was forecast to combine existing heavy rains and powerful winds over Batangas, Bataan, Cagayan and Agapan.

Meralco ruling stands for now; it's to be decided on its own merits

By Leticia B. Salazar
THE DISMISSAL OF COURT OF APPEALS Justice Vicente Roxas for his official actions does not automatically mean that the decision he passed in favor of Meralco was incorrect.

Anato Veloso, University of the East law dean, said that despite the findings of undue interest and bribery against Roxas, it was still possible that the ruling was correct on account of its merits.

The ruling nullified the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission appointing the counting of proxy votes in favor of the lawsuit during the election of Meralco's board. The SEC issued the ruling last week.

SC ruling angers Roxas staff; penalty too harsh, they say

By Lela B. Solares

MEMBERS OF THE STAFF OF General Appellate Justice Mariano Rodas expressed their anger and regret at the dismissal from the justice system of their colleagues by the Supreme Court.

The legal officers and other staff members said they could not help but cry upon learning of the Supreme Court decision on Monday night.

When the justices were in their offices yesterday morning, several of them were still checking their e-mails and had just received the news of the ruling.

Because of their anger at the ruling, they could not participate in the cups of the Supreme Court decision delivered to the justices.

Rodas' chief of staff, Lawrence David Lugo, said the justice's departure cost him and three other lawyers their professional careers as well as emotional support.

He didn't take a bribe

But aside from Lugo, Laro was also unhappy because it was his personal opinion that the professional conduct suit in Manila was excessive.

Laro said he was not challenging the Supreme Court decision. He said, however, he was in Manila, especially there to watch the one who took a bribe.

He said that based on the language of the Supreme Court decision, he would like to see the one who took a bribe.

Voices to bring to life relics at 9/11 museum

By David J. Phillips

This is a story that one-third of the world's population lived through to see history. Museum director Allen Gershenfeld says: "We can't tell people what they already know. There are so many living witnesses."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The museum opens July 2012 at the south site — victims they are able to learn to a firefighter's account of rescuing the twin-tower victims, or a police officer's account of the rescue. There will be a library to the museum where visitors can find stories by computer and in books.

Michelle Carter told her mother and father. She and her brother, James, each worked in a retail store near the building. The north tower was hit by a hijacked plane first. Carter, who worked in the south tower, was an investment broker, began working at flight times. She started calling James and couldn't get through. It was a huge moment.

Act of God

Seven years later, Carter, now 27, thinks James' death is responsible for John being in the ground and helping her to survive.

"The chance of me finding John in a crowd of thousands was just an act of God," she said. Carter said she never met John and she was the instrument that got John there.

GMA may have extra P1B to spend

By Norman Borlongan

PREMIER MAGALANABAY possibly has another P1 billion that she can spend to any way she wants if the Executive Board's acceptance of a foreign exchange rate of P42 to P43 to the US dollar in 2009 is approved, the opposition leader to the House said yesterday.

Rep. Romulo T. Lim, the House minority leader, said the proposed P1.4-billion budget contains "a new line" called the "exchange rate adjustment," with a budget of P1 billion, to cover for incremental costs from foreign exchange fluctuations.

"If they are wrong about the dollar exchange rate, then all of this would be gone. If they are right, however, either there is an savings or not. It is money that the House can spend however which may save money," Lim said in a press conference.

Unique allocation

He said this was the first time that a unique and unique allocation for the exchange rate. Lim said he would question the bill on the proposed allocation for the 2009 when the budget committee meets.

"Why are we providing P1 billion for this purpose?" he asked. (The Inquirer) was unable to reach the Finance Department.

of the P42 to P43 have been assumed by last year. What happens if the price average within or even overvalued and falls below the assumption? "It would be a problem," he said.

"Will this P1 billion come back to the treasury or can the executive department use this P1 billion under the savings allocation principle?" If yes, would this be an increase to another public loan for the executive department? he asked.

Two opinions

But Lim said he would not be surprised if the P42 to P43 assumed last year may be too optimistic.

"If the Budget General law is to support for the price, the exchange might actually be 40," he said.

According to a briefing paper prepared by the House minority, bills from the P1.4-billion GMA, where special purpose funds include the proposed P1.34 billion for intelligence funds and P6.24 billion for the park road, or the so-called priority development assistance fund of all sectors and House members.

Lim said that the congressional public law prepared for next year (2009) was not in the P1.4 billion allocated in 2008.

He also indicated that the P1.4 billion proposed park road for the 2009 would again reach P1.5 billion after the road beginning and also agreements during the budget hearings.

"Since that P6.24 billion was after the end and P1.4P appropriation under the proposed 2008 budget. This was up to P1.5 billion after the (2008) conference committee deliberation," he said.

GMA veto made NorthRail budget possible - Drilon

By CJ Top

FUNDING FOR THE CONTROVERSIAL NORTH Luzon Railway Corp. (NRLC) would have been excluded from the 2007 budget law for a number of reasons, but the veto of the President, former Justice, President Benigno Aquino III, made it possible.

Drilon said the House had passed a provision in the General Appropriations Bill specifically prohibiting the release of funds for debt payments arising from the NorthRail contract.

President Maunagang-Aquino "intervened his right in two-line provisions in the General Appropriations Bill," Drilon said. Judge Jose Sison was at Mindanao Regional Trial Court Branch 110.

At a time, the funding for the NorthRail contract, which he described as "an only legal line also completed," was not a legal line.

Drilon said he agreed to testify as a witness for the lawyers led by Henry Reyes, an executive group, and members of the urban poor who sought a temporary restraining order against the contract between the government-owned NorthRail and the China National Machinery and Equipment Corp.

The case was then alleged "legal and constitutional" in the contract, which provides for the construction of railways from Calapan City in Mindoro, Palawan.

Such delays include the congressional allegations that the contract was not properly with Philippine law requiring public bidding for a government project.

At president's hearing, Drilon announced in his capacity of a document, including the contract in itself and the results of a study by the University of the Philippines Law Center, which Drilon had commissioned to review the contract.

In an interview after the hearing, he said the NorthRail contract, which covered only 222 kilometers would cost $2.6 billion per kilometer, making it "the most expensive railway system in the world," except for the Japanese Shinkansen.

Despite the findings of irregularity in the contract, he said the House was divided from inquiring into it further because of the involvement of its executive officials of "executive privilege."

"NorthRail was the first equity of the Senate that was divided by this executive privilege," Drilon said yesterday.

He said the significance of Drilon's testimony was that it showed how the House, as part of its legislative branch, had recognized the UPLC Center's findings about NorthRail contract and had sought to stop it.

Magdalo defendants want trial postponed

By CJ Top

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE OFFICIAL in Manila for the United World Court, 2001, have asked a Manila court to postpone today's hearing of the case of a man, along with other defendants.

The officers represented by lawyers Renato Francisco to ask to postpone the case, because of the fact that the five-year-old case before the United World Court Branch 110.

Francisco's court appearance, however, is scheduled today on Oct. 23 in 39, Francisco said.

In a motion, the lawyers said they would be unable to present a witness Thursday and moved to postpone the hearing to Oct. 23 in 39. Francisco's clients are also now through their presentation of defense evidence.

But State Prosecutor Jose Luis Narura, a member of the prosecution panel, said he would oppose the motion to postpone the hearing, adding that it was just another delaying tactic on the part of the defense.

In the Sept. 9 motion, Francisco also requested the court to order the prosecution to produce the evidence they had in the case, which was filed by the prosecution.

Francisco said he would be unable to present a witness Thursday and moved to postpone the hearing to Oct. 23 in 39. Francisco's clients are also now through their presentation of defense evidence.

But State Prosecutor Jose Luis Narura, a member of the prosecution panel, said he would oppose the motion to postpone the hearing, adding that it was just another delaying tactic on the part of the defense.

Hanjin seeks to improve safety

SUBIC BAY—SHEPPARD HANJIN Heavy Industries Construction (SHIC) is to improve safety after the deaths of 15 workers in an accident in three years, an official said yesterday.

The new contract to the South Korean-based company came in a contract to build two superpipelines at the shipyard in the former US naval base at Subic Bay.

Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority (SBMA) administration Atty. Gen. Arsenio Arce said Hanjin was working to improve safety practices, adding that the workers had died in accidents since construction of the shipyard began in May 2005.

Arce said the rise of the shipyard, which he compared to an entire town, had been great.

The shipyard, which Hanjin says is the largest in the world, covers 230 hectares.

"This has been a challenge to us. Hanjin came from having no employees in May 2005, when they began building the shipyard, to 30,000 employees at this point," he added.

He said he had urged the workers to work "together with the culture of safety we seek to instill in all our workers at the SBMA."

Danish geologist says there's gold in wastes

COPENHAGEN—A Danish geologist said more gold could be extracted from waste waters if only small-scale mining and refining companies could develop technology to process them.

Dr. Omer Appel, geologist and senior advisor at the Danish Geological Survey of Denmark and Greenland, said the processing of mine water is critical to recovering gold. He said the use of this waste to stop the further contamination of rivers and seas, where traces of harmful chemicals used in extracting minerals are still visible.

"The minerals used in processing gold would still have great economic value," he said. "If there is a price premium for gold, it will be a huge selling point. But this chemical is being removed," he said. Appel, who visited the Philippines recently, has been conducting research on the small-scale mining industry for the past 20 years in Mongolia, Tanzania, Mali and Sudan, among other countries.

In August, he spent a week in Iloilo and Tubbataha in Benguet to observe additional small-scale mining in the town of Benguet and Tubbataha in Benguet.

An advocate of small-scale mining, Appel has worked with miners to avoid or regulate the use of mercury in the processing of minerals.

Using information from the Department of Health, he said around 140 tons of mercury are being released to various bodies of water in the Philippines today. "The chemical goes into the sea and then affects the local chain," he said.

Geologist Tuguegarao, officer-in-charge of the Mines and Geosciences Bureau in the Cordillera, said it is not necessarily viable to mine from the waste water.

"The gold recovery from mine water [today] is another case [there] in the 1980s and 1990s," he said.

He said, however, mining from waste water could be used to test the feasibility of deeper projects.

Minerals of the Benguet Mining Act Action Network (BMAN) said they would advocate traditional small-scale mining to protect the environment.

"We want gold that is processed through the waste water gold. We do not want materials that poison the environment," said Joseph Acuña, spokesman of BMAN.

He said traditional small-scale mining has been practiced in Benguet since before the Spanish came to the early 1500s to introduce large-scale mining.

"Small-scale mining is allowed by the community. The community always decide where the mine can mine because it is concerned about the environment. There are designated areas by small-scale mining, the community controls mining in some cases, residential areas and small areas," he said. (Doreen G. Lopez, Philippine Star)

Thieves dressed as cops strike again

15 men rob taxi cab terminal in Caloocan

By Nancy C. Carvajal

ROBBERS DISGUISED EITHER AS POLICEMEN OR soldiers attack yet again, victimizing the office and terminal of a taxi cab company in Caloocan City yesterday.

According to Senior Insp. Edgar Flores, National Capital Region Police Office Intelligence chief, yesterday's robbery was the seventh such incident this year in Metro Manila in which thieves dressed themselves as military or high-powered law enforcement to commit the crime.

Flores said the incident that the figure would be much higher had the police not intervened and arrested other suspects.

Five groups

He said that they have identified at least five groups which the police believe were behind the rash of robberies in the metropolitan area.

These were the groups named after Alvin Flores, Roy Alonzo, Am-pro Caloocan. (Quoted by an alias 'Bogus'.)

Based on intelligence reports received by the police, Flores said the groups said to be based in the Western and Middlesex have since moved their operations in Metro Manila.

Sharing scheme

The groups, he added, share members and resources.

"They make the hit, move back on the province and hide, then let others do the next target," Flores said.

According to him, at least 20 members of the different groups have been arrested while 18 others were killed by the police in encounters in Quezon City and Malabon City.

In yesterday's robbery, Caloocan police chief Insp. Philomeno Marasigan said at least 15 men armed with long firearms and grenades barged into the office of the Royal E. Transportation Inc. on Rose Street in Baras, Caloocan City, at around 1:30 p.m.

The men, who were dressed in military and Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) uniforms, took a full arsenal including automatic firearms from the taxi cab company's safe. They also seized several photos of the victims.

Marasigan said the thieves stayed for at least 15 minutes inside the establishment but failed to get the company's earnings for the day because they could not find the vault.

The robbery then led to a chase on two vehicles, a blue Mitsubishi Adventure (2007) and a Toyota Sierra without license plates.

Senior Insp. Marlene Matrone, the head of the crime investigating unit in Caloocan, said the Adventure's plate number was the same as that of a KIA van used in the robbery of a mid-company last week in Marikina City.

WHAT WENT BEFORE

A NUMBER of robberies in Metro Manila in the past months were committed by men disguised either as policemen or soldiers.

Last Feb. 5, about 15 heavily armed men in uniforms robbed the Josefa Balle branch of Biting Avenue, Quezon City. As they were leaving, some men with an umbrella waved around of money. The robbers had their guns holstered, avoiding law enforcement.

On March 28, eight men, some of whom were wearing caps and holding up a sign of the Philippine National Police, looted a bank and a jewelry store in the vicinity of the bank in Marikina City.

The men, who were wearing and holding firearms, identified themselves as police officers before approaching the victims. They also took the store's service vehicle.

On June 28, about 15 men who posed as policemen forcibly entered the office of a school principal in Marikina City and looted a jewelry store and a cash.

On July 1, about 15 men who posed as policemen entered the office of a school principal in Marikina City and looted a jewelry store and a cash.

The following day, seven armed men dressed as policemen entered a National Capital Region Police Office in Marikina City.

Senior Insp. Flores said, however, that the police did not have any information on the whereabouts of the robbers.

On Aug. 11, five men wearing military uniforms and carrying high-powered firearms entered two bank branches of the Blue Bank in Marikina City.

The robbers had just entered the bank when they were confronted by the police. The robbers fled, leaving behind a car.

MMDA: Metro flooding incidents down by 85%

By Beverly T. Martinez

AS TYPHOON "NANANG" DEMANDS heavy rain on the metropolitan area, the second straight day, Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) reports that flooding incidents have been reduced by 85 percent.

Premundo said reports from the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) show that flooding incidents have been reduced by 85 percent.

In 2007, he said, flooded areas in Metro Manila covered 13,000 hectares or about the size of five cities.

Since the task of flood control was transferred to the MMDA, the flood-prone areas now only cover 2,000 hectares, roughly the area covered by one city.

"We have been doing extensive cleanup. Also, a big flood control program is scheduled to be completed by next year," Premundo said.

When of the rain, he added, the floods are just going down than are caused mainly by clogged drains.

Premundo, meanwhile, said Metro Manila's road and sewerage department has been working on cleaning up the drains.

According to him, the MMDA has signed contracts with the operators of five landfills in Metro Manila and nearby provinces.

"Metro Manila's garbage disposal is under control," said Premundo.

He added that a new dump would soon open in San Mateo (Rizal province) that the agency could use.

Of the 3,000 metric tons of garbage produced by Metro Manila residents daily, 3,000 is 3,000 MT is taken to the Rodriguez landfill in Rizal while the rest is brought to other landfills, including one in Tarlac province.

The dump in Rizal has at least a life span of about five years, Premundo explained.

In addition, the dump in San Mateo City and Pinar del Rio City will be operational for three years and one year, respectively, he added.

According to Premundo, Metro Manila is also under way in target of recycling and of garbage.

The MMDA, meanwhile, he said, aims to reach a recycling rate of 25% by the end of the year.

As for the rain, Premundo said, at a school, nearly 25% of the rain is recycled.

Among them, he said, Marikina, where Premundo said to be among the top in recycling rain water.

Piping hot broth with foie gras . . . From page 1

As on baking duck, a restaurant's foie-gras dish is paid, a 75¢ per page or you could do individual steaks.

Real egg yolk and fat is not as processed. 350° oven, middle rack until lightly browned, about 15-20 minutes.

Cost: foie-gras—$12
12 egg yolks
1/2 pound butter, melted

1. Preheat oven to 350°.
2. In a bowl, whisk together 1/2 cup butter, 1/2 cup egg yolks, and 1/2 cup foie gras. Season with salt and pepper.

3. Pour mixture into a 12x18-inch baking dish. Bake until top is golden brown, about 15-20 minutes. Let cool for 5 minutes. Cut into squares. Serve warm or at room temperature.

4. To make individual steaks, cut the mixture into 1/2-inch-thick slices. Season with salt and pepper. Cook in a skillet over medium heat until browned on both sides, about 2-3 minutes per side. Serve immediately.

5. To make a more elegant dish, serve the mixture on a bed of rice or pasta. Top with a dollop of sauce and a garnish of fresh herbs.

6. If you don't like duck, you can use other meats, such as pork or beef. Just adjust the cooking time and temperature accordingly.

7. For a more sophisticated dish, add a touch of brandy or cognac to the mixture.

8. This recipe is inspired by a dish from a restaurant in Paris. It's a classic French dish that's been around for centuries.

9. The recipe is easy to adapt to your own tastes. You can use whatever ingredients you like.

10. This recipe is a great way to use up leftover duck. It's a delicious and easy way to enjoy a gourmet dish.
